IDEAS.

Patience is power.
To avoid great mistakes we must profit by small ones.

Learning is a good aid to thought but a poor substitute for it.

Men think little of what is said unless they think much of him who says it.

If we guard against all the possibilities of ill, we cannot use all the probabilities of good.

The less a man says of himself the less he exposes himself. Few people can bear to be turned inside out.

TAKE NOTICE.

Exhibition by the Model Schools in Tabernacle, Tuesday night, Nov. 10.

The usual holiday or Christmas Concert comes this year on Christmas evening, Dec. 21. Remember the date, and plan to be there.

Third month of Fall Term begins Wednesday, Nov. 5. It costs but very little to get the benefit of this month's schooling, and so be started far ahead for the winter.

Winter Term opens Wednesday, Dec. 10. Remember that any student who does not register at the beginning of the term has to pay an extra registration fee of 25 cents.

Persons who can furnish room or board for students in the Winter Term should talk with Treas. Osborne at once. Get your householder's permit and put your rooms in good condition, and you can both do good and make money.

FROM THE WIDE WORLD.

News comes that a hill at Palenque, in Mexico, has become an active volcano.

The horses of Emperor Francis Josef, of Austria, became unmanageable the other day, and he jumped out and walked home.

The Colombian government now asks for $10,000,000 right off for the Panama canal, instead of the $7,000,000 offered it.

The insurrection in the Republic of Colombia, South America, is still on, and a gold dollar will now buy 130 of their paper dollars.

IN OUR OWN COUNTRY.

Gov. Richard Yates, of Illinois, is very sick with typhoid fever.

The arbitrators on the great coal strike began their work at Washington on Thursday last.

Twenty-five persons, doctors and others, have been indicted for grave-robbing, and held to bail, in some cases as high as $5,000.

Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton, probably the ablest champion of woman suffrage in the world, died in New York, at the age of eighty-seven.

Andrew Murray, of New York, after distinguished surgeons gave no hopes of his recovery, stood up before a glass, cut out a cancer from his own tongue, bandaged the wound and has recovered.

COMMONWEALTH OF KENTUCKY.

Snow fell at various places in Kentucky Oct. 28.

The Louisville & Atlantic R. R. has the track now laid to Beattyville.

The third gusher in Knox county flowed at the rate of 480 barrels of oil a day.

The Kentucky Synod of the Cumberland Presbyterian church is in session at Princeton.

Broadhead station was robbed of $400 last week, and bloodhounds are after the robbers.

Small-pox has developed in Metcalf county, brought from North Dakota by a traveling man.

The weather indications point to our having much of cold rain, sleet and frost in November. Shelter the stock.

Typhoid fever is unusually fatal in Kentucky this year. Read carefully the article upon it on second page, and take all care.

Three attorneys, McQuown, Kohn and Phelps, have sued the Goebel estate for $5,000 each for services in the contest race for governor.

Elisha Hoskins and Chas. Powers were sentenced to life imprisonment for connection with the "Quarter House" fight in Bell county.

Geo. Gaskins, of Fleming county, was sitting on a fence with his gun resting on a lower rail, when it slipped, was discharged, and killed him instantly.

THE ELECTION.

The vote of Berea on Tuesday was light, standing as follows:

Republican 122
Democrat 25
Prohibitionist 6

Madison county goes Democratic by a small majority.

Hon. G. G. Gilbert seems to be re-elected to Congress from this district by about the expected majority.

No great surprises in the county at large. The Republicans hold the House of Representatives by a small majority.

Ohio and Indiana go Republican by a large majority, and the Republicans also re-elected Gov. Odell in New York by a rather narrow margin.

Mr. Jas. W. Bratcher compliments the CITIZEN office with specimens of turkeys weighing 3½ lbs each.

The fall term department socials of the College were held Tuesday night, as follows: College department at Prof. Dodge's; Academy and Farmers course at Science Hall; Normal at Gilbert Cottage; Industrial courses at Nichols House; Model Schools at Ladies Hall.

This remedy not only cures croup, but when given as soon as the first symptoms appear, will prevent the attack. A Woman's Awful Peril.
"There is only one chance to save your life and that is through an operation" were the startling words heard by Mrs. J. B. Then she began to use Electric Bitters, which wholly cured her. It's a wonderful Stomach, Liver and Kidney remedy. Cures Dyspepsia, Loss of Appetite. Try it. Only 50c. Guaranteed. ## MODERATE DRINKERS

THEY ARE RECRUITING SERGEANTS FOR ARMY OF DRUNKARDS.

The Fallacy of Their Arguments Exposed—Some Facts to Be Considered by Those Who Boast of Their "Capacity" for Liquor.

The New York American is continuing its regular publication of striking editorials on the drink question. In a recent issue it says:

These editorials on whisky drinking are not written especially for the man who by actual experience knows the results of excessive drinking. They are written in the hope that they may prompt serious thinking among men whose habits are not yet formed, that they may awaken a keen sense of responsibility among those who have young men in their charge.

Today let us briefly discuss the case of the so-called "moderate" whisky drinker. Of "moderate" drinkers at least half are struggling against the temptation to drink excessively. Of the moderate whisky drinkers, of those who pride themselves on their self-restraint, a great majority do drink to excess occasionally, and every time they make this mistake their moderation diminishes and their self-control is weakened.

There is no sadder drinker than the so-called "moderate" whisky drinker. He takes a drink, then takes another, then uses up his best energies and strength of will in the attempt to keep from taking a third. He was, technically, a "moderate" drinker last year, and considers himself a moderate drinker this year. But what he takes today he would have looked upon with horror a year or two years ago.

The "moderate" drinker, gradually drifting toward excess, suffers more keenly even than the confirmed drunkard. The drunkard takes his heavy dose of alcoholic poison. He wipes out utterly his self-respect, his strength of will, every desire to be a decent man. While the alcohol fasts his moral sufferings are over. He suffers physically the next day, then drinks again, and so on until the end.

The "moderate" drinker struggles constantly with himself. If he is an intelligent man, he constantly misrepresents himself and fears his growing inclination. If he has the power of self-examination, he knows how much his success is hurt by his drinking; he knows how much harm it does to those who blindly rely on his statements of his moderation. He knows what a lie the talk of moderation is.

The drinker who foolishly talks, at home and abroad, of his "moderate" drinking and his harmless character is among the most harmful of men. Turning his brief period of life he makes whisky respectable. He is the recruiting sergeant who adds to the army of drunkards.

Another dangerous and at the same time preposterous creature is the besotted fool who boasts of the amount that he can drink. In every barroom, in every club, you meet a poor, befuddled, weakened creature bragging about his "capacity." This same man sneers at the respectable human being who cannot drink much.

It is actually a fact that the drunkard who boasts of the quantity of alcohol that he can put into his system is often admired by other men. He never is compared, as he should be compared, to a hog with tuberculosis.

When you next hear a man boasting of what he can drink and filling the minds of young men with a hideous addiction to be brutal, give the hard drinker a few facts.

Tell him that the capacity to drink a great deal simply means a weakened, degenerate heart. It does not mean a strong heart. Take a young man in normal health, with a strong heart and a good supply of blood. His system is at par. If you add a little alcohol, you overdrive his heart and flood the brain tissue with alcoholic blood, causing drunkenness. This drunkenness, easily caused, proves physical superiority, not inferiority.

An athlete in perfect condition is made drunk by an extremely small amount of alcohol. The wretched outcast drunkard on the street would take five times as much to stop the sinking of his hands and get himself in condition to beg. That does not mean that the athlete is inferior to the gutter drunkard.

The child fifteen or sixteen years old in the last stages of consumption is sometimes kept alive by the use of alcohol. Such a child can absorb without intoxication three times as much as the strongest man.

These facts may convince the man who boasts of his capacity that his boast is simply a confession of weakness, of physical decay.

Nicotine an Enemy of Brains.
Dr. Herbert Fisk of the Northwestern university believes he has gathered statistics which prove that the use of tobacco is incompatible with the use of brains. He declares that among his students the scholarship is in inverse ratio to the amount of tobacco. The students who smoke and drink are the lowest marks of course say it is due to tobacco. A somewhat careful observation of facts has convinced him it is tobacco. Last year not one of the boys who used tobacco stood in the first rank of scholarship. This has been the usual rule.

RELIGIOUS THOUGHT.

Gems Gleaned From the Teachings of All Denominations.

Christianity is the religion of justice as well as mercy.—Rev. Dr. Cortland Myers, Baptist, Brooklyn.

The Test of Wealth.
If a man can say, "I am a man, and nothing that is human is beyond my care," then I say he is rich.—Rev. Dr. Savage, Unitarian, New York.

A Face to Be Loved.
The sweetest thought to me of all is that Christ's is a face that wants to be loved.—Rev. Dr. Frank De Witt Talmage, Presbyterian, Chicago.

Reference to Others.
We help ourselves and help each other in living and working in deference to the rights of others.—Rev. C. A. Langston, Unitarian, Atlanta, Ga.

Man Walks by Faith.
From the first step of the child to the last step into the cold waters of what we call death man walks by faith.—Rev. Dr. Lowry, Baptist, Kansas City, Mo.

The One Basis.
There is but one basis of a happy life—the practice of virtue and the love of truth.—Rev. Dr. Elwood Worcester to Students of Pennsylvania University.

The Condition of Entrance.
Character is the condition of entrance into the presence of God. A character of holiness—Christ in you—is the hope of glory in an endless eternity.—Rev. J. L. Chaughey, Presbyterian, Rochester, N. Y.

Warning the Young.
There is no office of a faithful preacher or of the schoolteacher or of the college professor or of the newspaper more important than to swing the red light of danger in the eyes of the boys and girls.—Rev. J. C. Hall, Congregationalist, Denver.

Purpose in Everything.
God has a purpose in everything. But the mysteries of God have been hid from the ages, a purpose too profound for the finite mind, too far-reaching for human comprehension, unveiled by the divine spirit.—Rev. M. P. Fikes, Baptist, Baltimore.

Crowned With a Halo.
God takes the life we have to live here, with all its varying conditions, and crowns it with a halo, makes living a joy in that it is a foretaste, a faint gleaming of the life that is to come.—Rev. Dr. J. W. Walden, Presbyterian, Athens, Ga.

Under Scrutiny From Above.
Every man is a creator, and on him rests the responsibility of making his work what it should be, working for the satisfaction of his own conscience, always remembering that he is under scrutiny from above.—Rev. Dr. Absop, Episcopalian, Brooklyn.

Moral Responsibility.
Every man has a conscience and a sense of some sort of moral responsibility. He will either worship the true God or some false god. All character is either positive or negative. God blesses the world by true characters.—Bishop Joyce, Methodist, Chicago.

Getting Away From Vice.
The tendency of human life is to move out of contact with vice, to get as far away from it as possible. The tendency of the Christian gospel is to move into contact with vice as fast as possible and to overcome it with good. As people gain a competence they move away from the home in which by frugality and righteousness they have prospered.—President Farnce of Brown University, Providence, R. I.

Will Keep His Promise.
The dove Lord, who watches the sparrow's flight and fall and who has given us some faint glimpses of what is to be, will keep the wonderful promise, "I go to prepare a place for you," and we need have no disturbing thoughts, but, on the contrary, perfect confidence. Our chief concern should be how to make the best and the most of this life, for if we are in the right now we surely cannot go wrong hereafter.—Late Rev. Dr. George H. Hepworth, Congregationalist.

True Friendship.
As dew to the parched earth, as the sail to the shipwrecked mariner, so is friendship amid the cares and trials of life. If men decay friendship, it is because they have selected those unworthy of trust or because they themselves are inconstant. Falsity in friends is impossible. It only occurs where a masked friendship has been the counterfeit of virtue. So called friends deceive because they never should have been selected as friends.—Rev. Dr. Levy, Hebrew, Pittsburgh.

The Age Demands Facts.
This is an age of facts. Men are demanding the facts before they accept anything. Every claim, whether made for a new machine, a new industrial enterprise or a new theory, must meet this test. Christianity must meet it also. "You claim your religion transforms the character of the person embracing it? Very well, let us see if it does." And it is a duty we owe such questioners to show them by our keeping of our Lord's commandments that our companionship with him is transforming our lives.—Rev. Milton J. Norton, Congregationalist, San Francisco.

No Need of a Church Trust.
This world does not need a church trust. The church today would not be so powerful, either in numbers or in influence, had it not been for the distinct work of the different divisions. Neither would its men and machinery be so efficient. The world owes a debt to every denomination that has been true to the gospel of Jesus Christ and the New Testament. One unmistakable sign of the times is that we are getting farther away from organic church union and closer to the more important thing, unity of effort and unity of spirit in the name of Jesus Christ.—Rev. C. J. Hall, Denver.

TYPHOID FEVER.

This is not a subject of pressing interest to the people of this vicinity, at the present time, as nearly all who have had the disease are now recovered. Indeed the number of cases hereabouts has been less than in many other localities. But the year 1902 has seen a wide prevalence of this disease in various parts of our Commonwealth, and it has been more than usually fatal. The approach of cold weather is favorable, but it by no means removes the danger.

In general it is a person's own fault if he has typhoid fever. This is true of nearly all the troubles of life. We all agree that most people could avoid poverty if they were industrious, sensible, economical, that people could have a good reputation and be respected, if they would "quit their meanness"; and that a very large majority of painful or fatal accidents might be avoided by constant carefulness. But many seem to think that sickness, especially in the forms most fatal, is a sort of Divine dispensation from which there is no escape. This is a terrible, almost a foolish, mistake. It is true of typhoid fever, quite as certainly as of most of the ills of life, that it comes because we choose it, or at least because we are too ignorant or too lazy to take common sense precaution against it. Of course there are exceptions. Sickness in some form is liable to come sometimes to all. But if every one who reads this little article will act upon its suggestions, it is not likely that one of them will ever have this fever. But as the world goes, each one living in a "happy go lucky" way, it is pretty safe to predict that many readers of this very paper will die of typhoid fever, and some of them during the coming year.

The steps necessary to the avoiding of typhoid fever are not expensive or difficult. A little thoughtfulness is necessary, but that is needed to secure anything that is desirable. Two kinds of precautions should be taken at all times, even if there be no fever in the neighborhood. First, care should be taken that the water drunk should be pure. It may be clean and sparkling, entirely agreeable to the taste, and yet the deadly germs be lurking in it. It is best not to drink of water indiscriminately, wherever one may be, whenever a little thirst is felt, but to wait until one comes to the usual source of supply known to be safe. This is far more likely to be a cistern than a well. The water from the clouds has been distilled by nature's perfect process, and if the house roof is allowed to be rinsed off by the rain, whenever the weather has long been dry, before the water is turned into the cistern, and if the cistern be tight, there is little danger. The other caution, always in point, is to keep the premises clean. Do not throw garbage or dirty water upon the ground near the house, and especially not near the sources of water supply. It is better to dig pits for such things, filling frequently and digging new ones. Especially have out-houses at a safe distance. And here the free use of dry dirt, daily, will work wonders, both in preventing bad odors and in guarding against disease. "Mother Earth" is a dear friend of ours.

If there are cases of fever at hand, of course the cure should be increased. In case of doubt as to the safety of drinking water, boil it before using. Those having to do with typhoid patients should see to it that all the excrements from the bowels of the sick one are thoroughly disinfected. The Kentucky State Board of Health recommends for this purpose chloride of lime (to be found in any drugstore) dissolved in water. The expense is very slight. A single ounce of the chloride of lime in a pint of water left in the vessel with the bowel discharges for an hour before emptying it, will remove nearly all the danger. It should be made a criminal offense to neglect such precautions.

People are wild with alarm if there seems to be any probability of smallpox or cholera visiting their neighborhood. Too many practically invite typhoid fever by their criminal carelessness. Yet ten times of the fever where one dies of the other diseases combined. Sound far and wide the warning to guard against this the greatest destroyer of human life in our midst!

Food Changed To Poison.
Putrefying food in the intestines produces effects like those of arsenic, but Dr. King's New Life Pills expel the poisons from clogged bowels, gently, easily but surely, curing Constipation, Biliousness, Sick Headache, Fevers, all Liver, Kidney and Bowel troubles. Only 25c at all drugstores.

THE HOME.

CLEANING RIBBONS.

Fill a glass fruit jar about three-fourths full of gasoline, put in your soiled ribbons of any kind or color, except white; screw the cover down as tightly as possible. Leave the ribbons in for three or four hours; shaking the jar several times in the meantime. Then take out the ribbons, shake out each one separately and hang over a clean, white cloth in the open air; leave them exposed to the air and sunshine until all odor has disappeared. No pressing will be necessary. Pour off the clear gasoline into your tank and empty out the dirt which will have settled in bottom of jar. The same gasoline can be returned to the jar if one wishes, keeping it tightly covered. It will do to use several times.

White ribbons turn yellow when cleaned with gasoline, and for these prepare a suds of like-warm water and ivory soap. Wash them as you would a fine handkerchief, do not wring, but squeeze them through the fingers. Rinse and let them partially dry. Take down while still damp and roll smoothly over a wide cardboard, rolling a strip of white cloth with it. Have the cloth long enough to cover the ribbon entirely and place the whole under a heavy weight. Leave them until they have had time to dry. The ribbon will come out in much better shape than if as ironed.

AN ECONOMICAL RECIPE.

When a very practical home wife remarked that the following recipes had saved her many dollars besides labor, I asked her at once to please give me the benefit of them to help other sister-women with them. She responded by giving me her methods, and I think that every mother rearing a young family should have them. It is how to remove ink spots and paint and grease stains, etc., and it does it successfully too. Whenever you get an ink spot on your garments wash it at once in cold water so as to remove as much of the ink as possible—then wash the stain in lemon-juice and salt, and lay in the sun to dry. If the first trial does not do the trick.

For paint on clothing use equal parts of ammonia and turpentine, saturate the spots two or three times and then wash out in hot suds of ruin water and perfume; soap suds will not remove it, but no matter how hard the paint is, this method will rid it entirely. Remove grass stains by washing with alcohol.—In Up-to-date.

NOT IN ANY TRUST

Many newspapers have lately given currency to reports by irresponsible parties to the effect that

THE NEW HOME SEWING MACHINE CO. had entered a trust or combination; we wish to assure the public that there is no truth in such reports. We have been manufacturing sewing machines for over a quarter of a century, and have established a reputation for ourselves and our machines that is the envy of all others. Our "New Home" machine has never been rivaled as a family machine. It stands at the head of all High Grade sewing machines, and stands on its own merits.

The "New Home" is the only really HIGH GRADE Sewing Machine on the market. It is not necessary for us to enter into a trust to save our credit or pay any debts as we have no debts to pay. We have never entered into competition with manufacturers of low grade cheap machines that are made to sell regardless of any intrinsic merits. Do not be deceived, when you want a sewing machine don't send your money away from home; call on a "New Home" Dealer, he can sell you a better machine for less than you can purchase elsewhere. If there is no dealer near you, write direct to us.

THE FARM.

SHREDDED FODDER.

Opinions have varied much as to the usefulness of shredded fodder, but those who have been strongest in their condemnation have probably not given it a fair trial. When the shredder first came into use many shredded their fodder into stacks like straw, and often left the stacks open to the weather, with the result that much of the fodder heated and spoiled. These men have ever since been willing to condemn the process as a useless and expensive one, but the careful farmer who sheds his fodder into the barnyard when it is dry, and keeps it dry, is as enthusiastic in praise of the method as his neighbor is in opposition to it.

Expert investigation has shown that shredded fodder, if kept dry, has as high a feeding value as timothy hay. The advantages claimed for the shredded fodder over the article in the natural state are easier to handle, the animals will eat it up cleaner, and the refuse works into manure much quicker than the whole stalks. This last point, though seemingly a small one, is nevertheless quite important. Western farmers have found that colts may be wintered exceedingly well on shredded fodder and a light grain ration, while the refuse makes very good bedding. The pitch in the butts of the cornstalks absorb the liquid manure readily, and in some respects this refuse makes better bedding than straw.

In feeding to dairy cattle which receive a grain ration a good method is to mix the grain with the fodder. This is the natural way, and aids the animal to digest the grain more thoroughly than if the roughage and grain were fed separately. It is hardly advisable nor expedient to follow this method with cattle receiving a heavy grain ration, which may be fed separately more easily and quickly than in any other way.

In seasons where feed is plentiful and grain is cheap it will hardly pay to shred fodder, as the process is rather an expensive one, but when hay is scarce and prices are prohibitive, shredded fodder will be found a very acceptable substitute. The most essential point with shredded fodder is a dry place in which to store it. With this secured, satisfactory results are almost sure to follow. Selected.

The cow utilizes only about 25 per cent of her food in the production of milk, the remainder going to support her body and into the manure heap. This estimate does not apply to all cows, however, as some of them give more or less milk than others; but all cows must be maintained from the food consumed, and one good cow will therefore give more profit than another that is inferior.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON VI, FOURTH QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, NOV. 9.

Text of the Lesson, Josh. xvi, 14-25. Memory Verses, 11, 15—Golden Text, Josh. xvi, 15—Commentary Prepared by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Copyright, 1902, by American Press Association.] 14, 15. As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord.

Joshua, having lived a hundred and ten years and being conscious that the time had come for him to go the way of all the earth, gathered the tribes of Israel and reminded them that not one thing had failed of all the good things which the Lord had spoken concerning them (chapter xvi, 23; xviii, 11). He called for the elders, the heads of tribes, the judges and officers to present themselves before him at Shechem, and there he rehearsed unto them the story of God's dealings with them and entreated them to fear the Lord and serve Him in sincerity and truth, telling them that whatever they might decide he was determined that he and his house would serve the Lord. It was in order that they and all that they had might serve Him that He had brought them forth from the land of Egypt, the house of bondage (Ex. ii, 12; x, 26). If we have been redeemed by the precious blood of Christ, it is in order that we may with humility and gladness serve the living and true God while we wait for His Son from heaven (1 Thess. i, 9, 10; Acts x, 19, 18, c, 2), that the Lord taught this discipline that he was among them as one that serveth the way of service is the way of true greatness (Luke xxi, 24-27), and that by love we are to serve one another (Gal. v, 13).

16-18. God forbid that we should forsake the Lord to serve other gods. We also will serve the Lord, for He is our God. They certainly had every reason to serve Him only and truly, for, as they said, He had brought their fathers out of the house of bondage and preserved them and brought them to that land, and Joshua had just reminded them that the Lord had given them a land for which they did not labor, cities which they had not built and vineyards and olive yards which they had not planted (verse 13). Yet they had already had occasion to say many times in their brief history, "O Lord our God, other lords beside Thee have had dominion over us" (Isa. xxi, 13). That which Joshua had said to the elders, "The Lord in whose hand thy breath is, and whose are all thy ways hast thou not glorified" (Josh. v, 23), might be truthfully said to many other gentiles as well as Jews, and how many seem to forget that it is God alone who giveth us life and breath and all things and in whom we live and move and have our being (Acts xvii, 28). This should be enough to lead any one to wish to serve such a benefactor; but we cannot serve Him till we are redeemed, for, although He has created us, sin has separated us from Him, and the carnal mind, being at enmity with God, cannot please God (Rom. vii, 5, 8). As freely as God by His own power redeemed Israel from Egypt, that they might serve Him, so freely He redeems every one who will let Him that all such may serve Him and walk in newness of life for their own highest happiness as well as for His glory (Rom. vi, 24; vi, 4, 11, 13, 16).

19-21. And the people said unto Joshua, Nay, but we will serve the Lord.

Joshua in reply to their assurance that they would serve the Lord reminds them that they must be sincere, for the Lord is both holy and jealous. Holy is the only word that is used of God three times in one verse, and that only in two places (Isa. xl, 3; Rev. i, 8). He, being holy, requires a holy people (Lev. xix, 2; 1 Pet. i, 15, 16), a people willing to be wholly His, separated unto Himself alone, that He may do His utmost for them and be magnified in them. God is called Jealous in just seven different places (Ex. xx, 5; xxxiv, 14; Deut. iv, 24; v, 9; vi, 15; Josh. xxiv, 19; Nah. i, 2), though His jealousy is spoken of in other passages. The thought implied is simply that He desires to possess fully that which is His for the highest good of the possession. He delights to give and to bless, but He is hindered by our half-heartedness and lack of confidence in Him.

22-24. The Lord our God will we serve, and His voice will we obey.

Hearing their firm protestation of a great determination to serve the Lord, Joshua further tells them that in taking this stand they must understand that they are taking a stand against themselves, and they must turn with their whole heart to God by putting away all strange gods from among them. We all need this cleansing so much, for we are inclined to take sides with ourselves against God. We are apt to say as Simon Peter said to our Lord when He first spoke of His sufferings and of His death on the cross, "He is far from thee (thyself)." But our Lord immediately taught him and the other disciples that all who would follow Him must deny self and bear the cross (Matt. xvi, 22, 24).

25. So Joshua made a covenant with the people that day.

This verse and also verse 1 says that it was done at Shechem, as Shechem was a city of refuge (xx, 7) and signifies "shoulder." It is all suggestive of this—that we must find in the Lord our constant refuge from self and sin and in our conscious weakness dwell between His shoulders and let the government of all our affairs and of ourselves also be upon His shoulder (Ps. xlii, 7, 11; Deut. xxxiii, 12; Isa. ix, 6, 7). The stone that witnessed and heard it all (verse 27) is also suggestive of the stone of Isa. xxviii, 16; Ps. cxviii, 22.

The night was passed with snatches of sleep by all the party. In the morning, after the pork and corn bread meal of the country, the travelers again got into the carriages. While they were standing before the gate prior to departure Mark saw Stuart out by the well-house. He went there to bid her goodbye.

"Squire," he said, "I wish there was some way in which I could show you the gratitude I feel toward you. When I think of my fate, had you not appeared in the nick of time to save me by your wit and daring and sacrifice, I feel that I would like to make some corresponding sacrifice for you."

"Laws, I didn't do nothing. Besides,"—she leaned over the wall and looked down into its depths—"you and me is too differ. You and me is a gentleman, and I am poor white trash."

There was an inexpressible melancholy in her tone.

"Squire," Mark went on, "I have made an arrangement with your father to make a lady of you. I can't make such a sacrifice for you as you have made for me; that is impossible; but I can do this if you will let me and consent to the plan. I shall be off in a moment, and before I go I want you to promise me that you will consent. I am still in danger, and you must grant me this, please a last favor."

The girl burst into tears.

"Promise."

"I don't know what I do."

"Do you promise?"

"Yes, I promise."

With a pressure of the hand he turned away, and slinking to the gate, got into the carriage beside Laura. Dandel and Mrs. Fain had started. Mark followed, and had gone but a short distance when he heard Jakey calling to him. He pulled in the pony and waited for the boy to come up. Jakey was holding something out to him, which, as he drew nearer, Mark recognized as the red silk handkerchief.

"Squire sent it for y'."

"Tell her that I'll never part with it."

"N I got the squirrel gun," said the boy.

"All right, Jakey. Keep it to remember me by."

Mark grasped the boy's hand and then drove on. Laura Fain leaned back on the cushions in silence.

CHAPTER XIX.

THOMAS GREEN AND WIFE.

"Do you take me to be your husband?"

Mark designed driving to Anderson, some twelve miles from the Slacks' house, where he knew there was a road leading up to the mountains through a place called Altamont, some twenty miles further, to McMinnville. He was informed by people he met on the road that Altamont had been recently occupied in force by the Union troops. With luck they might reach the Union lines, which would doubtless extend several miles from Altamont, that afternoon.

"Within six hours," said Mark, "I shall either be safe among Union soldiers or our way back to Chattanooga."

Laura shuddered, but said nothing.

Mark found a very different condition of affairs at Anderson from what he had found along the road. The Confederates had some cavalry force there and more at Dunlap, five miles north. On the road he heard that General Bragg was at Dunlap, but with no troops save cavalry.

"I see it all," said the spy to himself.

"The wily fox is confronting our forces with a handful of cavalry, while the two divisions of Chenham and Withers are marching north behind him, and the main force has gone to Knoxville by rail on a line still farther east. No wonder our generals are puzzled and watching a line from Battle creek to Cumberland gap. If the Lord will only let me get through to carry this information, I'll never ask to live to go on another such expedition."

The party were stopped near Anderson by a picket. Mrs. Fain produced her pass and stated that the two behind her were in her company. The officer took an especial care in reading it, and when Mark and Laura came up they got safely through without question.

Mark was now anxious about the picket which must be passed in a few minutes on the road leading west from Anderson. Mrs. Fain was still ahead, and he hoped that all would go as well as at the picket just passed. Not a word was spoken between him and Laura; both dreaded getting out of Anderson, but once past the next picket they would breathe easier.

When they reached it, Mrs. Fain had been passed through and gone on. The officer in command, however, had read the pass carefully. He had not noticed any mention of Mark in it.

"Where's your pass?" he asked.

"Didn't the lady ahead show it to you?" asked Mark.

"Her pass didn't include you."

"Didn't it?" Mark feigned surprise.

"No."

"Oh, I forgot; mine and my wife's is separate," and he drew out the pass of "Thomas Green and wife."

Meanwhile Laura had turned white as a cloth. The officer read the pass, and would doubtless have let them go had he not noticed Laura's agitation.

"You'll have to go back to headquarters and get Major Tallafiero's order on that," he commanded at Anderson.

Mark remonstrated. He argued that he would become separated from Mrs. Fain; he urged his wife's desire to reach her sick father. All in vain. He was told that the headquarters were only half a mile down the road and he would lose but little time. He made a virtue of necessity and drove back with apparent good nature.

When he reached the house that was pointed out to him as headquarters, he left Laura in the phaeton and went inside. The commanding officer had gone to Dunlap, five miles away, to pay his respects to General Bragg, and would not be back for an hour or two.

Mark resolved to report his absence to the officer of the picket post. In the hope that he would not be compelled to wait, he drove to the picket and used his tongue persuasively, but to no purpose. The more anxious he seemed the more resolved grew the captain.

There seemed to be nothing to do but return and await the arrival of the commanding officer. Mark reluctantly turned the horse's head and drove back to headquarters. Laura's heart sank within her.

It was sunset when Major Tallafiero, a pleasant-looking man of twenty-seven or twenty-eight, rode up to the door, and turning his horse over to an orderly entered the office.

"Major Tallafiero?" asked Mark.

"At your service, sir."

"Major, I have been detained by the officer at the picket, who wants your name on my pass. My wife's mother has gone on, and her daughter is very anxious to join her. It is extremely unfortunate for us to get so far separated from Mrs. Fain."

"Fain, of the Fains of Chattanooga?"

"The same."

"I have heard of the family, but have never had the pleasure of meeting any member of it. One of my friends is engaged to Miss Fain. I have just parted from him at Dunlap."

Mark and Laura cast a quick glance at each other—a glance of terror on the part of Laura.

"We are fortunate in falling into your hands," said Mark, and I beg you will not delay us a moment." And Mark handed him the pass.

"Certainly not." And the major took up a pen to write his endorsement. First he read the pass carefully. He was thinking of what his friend Fitz Hugh had told him of the Fains. He was under the impression that there was but one daughter.

"Mr. Green," he said, looking up from the pass, "hadn't you better stay here over night? The road is mountainous and infested by guerrillas. It is positively dangerous to travel."

"By no means. What would Mrs. Fain think of our not joining her on the road?"

"It is dangerous for her as well as you. I'll send a messenger after her and advise her stopping at some farmhouse. I'll do better than that. I'll send a corporal and half a dozen men to insure her safety till morning."

There was something in the man's tone, polite as it was, that indicated to Mark that he was held for further information.

"As you please, major."

"And I shall insist upon your accepting my hospitality. One connected in any way with my friend Fitz Hugh must not want for any comfort I can supply."

The house occupied by Major Tallafiero belonged to a family who had gladly given up a portion of it for the safety insured by the presence of a commanding officer. The major was given a room down stairs for an office, and a bedroom up stairs. When it was decided that Mark and Laura should remain he gave Mrs. Green, as he called her, the use of the latter for the purpose of arranging her toilet before supper.

When Laura was up stairs Mark was looking out of the window of the major's office. He saw the men ride off to overtake Mrs. Fain. To his consternation another cavalryman, with a letter in his belt, mounted his horse and dashed down the road.

Laura came down at that moment, and Mark said to her anxiously,

"I am detained on suspicion. I shall be taken back to Chattanooga," and he pointed to the courier.

The color left Laura's cheeks. They had got so near to safety, and now, after so many dangers, the end was at hand. She could scarcely sustain herself as she tottered into the room occupied as the office.

This is the letter the courier bore northward. It was addressed on the envelope to Captain Cameron Fitz Hugh, near Dunlap:

ANDERSON, Aug. 29, 1862.

MY DEAR CAMERON—A man purporting to be Thomas Green, with his wife, formerly a Miss Fain, of Chattanooga, is here, desiring a pass to the Union lines. There is something suspicious about the man. The couple are separated from the wife's mother, and the father has very ill of Nashville. I dislike to detain them, and I do not regard it safe to pass them. Can you help me out of the difficulty? Yours very truly,

WALLACE TALLAFIERRO.

Major Tallafiero soon joined Mark and Laura in his office, and offering his arm to Laura led the way to the supper room. His treatment of both was most deferential, but it failed to deceive either that they were prisoners.

There was a strength of nerve in Mark that would not break while there was hope. He chatted with the host or jailer, whichever he might be called, with ease, and at times with gaiety. Not so Laura. The situation was too frightful for her to endure without some manifestation of anxiety. She ate nothing. She did not hear what was said to her, and her eyes plainly showed the troubled spirit within. Mark made no reference to her condition till after supper. Then, when all three went out on the veranda, he said to her:

"Come, let us take a stroll. You have been traveling all day, and this delay troubles you. A walk in the air will revive you."

Mark resumed with such apparent carelessness that he was free to walk about where he liked that Tallafiero had not the will to stop him. Besides, he had no heart to interfere with the pleasure of a woman whom he was pretending to treat as a guest. The couple walked leisurely down the road, Mark looking at the sunset tints with well-assumed indifference, occasionally pointing to some object by the way or in the distance, calling Laura's attention to it at the same time. He knew the major's gaze was fixed upon him, and he was doing all this for a purpose.

The road led straight from the house a short distance and then entered a wood. As soon as they were concealed behind the trees Mark stopped suddenly and turned to Laura:

"My God, this is terrible!"

"You are lost?" said Laura faintly.

She could scarcely speak the words.

"Yes, I. But you—what have I led you into? Why was it not over on that morning when it was intended? Then you would not be implicated; now your good name is—"

"No one will trouble me," she gasped.

"But you—they will drag you—"

"You have protected me—a spy. Not only that—that is nothing in comparison with having passed as my wife. There is a blight."

"I can bear it."

"There is but one way out of this disgrace. You must be married before we return to that house. And to whom?"—his voice changed from a rapid, excited tone to deep gloom—"to one whom most die on the scaffold. At any rate you will be free. You will be a widow."

Laura stood, the very impersonation of despair.

"All I can do to atone for this," Mark went on rapidly, "and it is nothing—is to make you my wife, since I have passed you as such. Laura, will you marry me?"

She looked at him earnestly. Her eyes were big with deep emotion. There was a look in them that he could not understand.

"Then I can do nothing for you."

"I will marry only the man who loves me, and whom I love."

"Oh, Laura," he said, "if your heart were only mine, then it would be different. I love you so well, I worship you with such fervor that I would go back to that dreadful jail without a word could I place you where you were before you met me. But you—"

Laura burst into a torrent of tears.

This man, who had so suddenly appeared in her life, who had won her sympathy; who had compelled her admiration; who had absorbed her whole being into his daring, chivalrous, reckless nature—this man loved her, and he was doomed!

With a cry she threw her arms around his neck.

"Laura, sweetheart," said Mark, caressing her, "we have but little time. We know not whom we shall have to face. My true character must soon be known. Will you give yourself to one who will doubtless tomorrow be claimed by—"

"Pale as ashes she put her hand over his mouth that he might not speak the word 'death.'"

"Will you? Speak?"

"Yes, now, quick; what can we do?"

"Marry ourselves."

"How?"

He grasped her hand. There was a ring upon it—a plain gold band. He took it off, and putting it on her finger again said:

"I, Mark—"

"Is it really Mark?"

"Yes, I am Mark Maynard. I, Mark, take you, Laura, to be my wife. Do you take me to be your husband?"

"I do."

"Then we are man and wife in the sight of God!"

"Man and wife under the law. We are really married."

Scarcely was this hurried ceremony over when a cavalryman came riding leisurely from the direction of headquarters. He had been sent by Major Tallafiero—who, as soon as Mark was out of sight, became anxious with regard to him—with instructions to keep him in sight without appearing to do so.

There was nothing left for them to do but return to the house. As they walked Mark whispered:

"I feel again all the confidence I have ever felt. I must live to make you happy. Be ready for anything that may happen, my darling, my wife. I shall doubtless play some bold game; I don't know what, but it will be bold. If I leave you suddenly, most me (should I succeed in my attempt) within the Union lines. If not, we will meet—in heaven."

These few words were all that Mark had time to say to his newly married wife. For scarcely had they turned to go back when they met the major. He was uneasy lest Mark should depart without leave. He accompanied them back to the house.

CHAPTER XX.

FLIGHT.

It was nine o'clock in the evening. Major Tallafiero and his guests were sitting in his office room chatting. A clatter of horses' hoofs was heard at the front of the house and some one dismounted. In another moment there was a tramp of cavalry boots in the hall; all turned to the open door—and there stood Captain Cameron Fitz Hugh.

For a moment he regarded Mark and Laura sternly; then advancing a few steps he bowed low to Laura.

"Captain," said the major rising, "I suppose it is useless to deny to this lady and gentleman that I deemed it my duty to make sure of their identity before allowing them to pass. The family to which they claim to belong is known to you; therefore I sent to you for information. I see you have answered my inquiry in person. If you vouch for them I shall be happy to pass them in the morning, and shall apologize for their detention at the same time—my excuse being the cause we serve."

All eyes were fixed on Fitz Hugh, Mark's and Laura's with ill-concealed anxiety.

"This was Miss Fain," said Fitz Hugh. "She would not be traveling as any man's wife unless she were married to him. If you detain them, you must do so on your own responsibility."

Both Mark and Laura drew a sigh of relief.

"I have no desire to detain them," said Tallafiero, "after what you have said, but it is altogether too late for them to proceed tonight. The only remedy I can make for discommoding them is to make them comfortable. Mrs. Green, your room is ready for you."

"Go tell Captain Heath that the man who was here this evening has gone, and I want him followed and brought back. Tell him to send by all the roads."

The man saluted and went away.

A Weak Stomach

Indigestion is often caused by over-eating. An eminent authority says the harm done thus exceeds that from the excessive use of alcohol. Eat all the good food you want but don't overload the stomach. A weak stomach may refuse to digest what you eat. Then you need a good digestant like Kodol, which digests your food without the stomach's aid. This rest and the wholesome tonic Kodol contains soon restore health. Dieting unnecessary. Kodol quickly relieves the feeling of fullness and bloating from which some people suffer after meals. Absolutely cures indigestion.

KENTUCKY HONOR.

Kentuckians are jealous of their honor. It has never been safe to call a Kentuckian a liar. The typical Kentucky man wants it understood that his word is always as good as his bond; that he will always do the right thing whether there was a previous bargain or not. Yet a man of honor sometimes does a dishonorable thing. When this happens it is always through ignorance. He would never do a mean thing if he knew it were mean. Some of the people who went to see the game last Saturday and stood outside of the fence, instead of buying a ticket and going inside, did not know they were doing a dishonorable thing. But they were getting for nothing that which cost their neighbors and friends hard cash. It takes money, and a good deal of it to bring 16 men here from Lexington, and send them back. The football boys had to pay the L. & N. R. R. 32 fares, and then there were bills for hotel, livery and advertising. It costs the ball players over $65 "spot cash" to give us a delightful afternoon of sport. Every one who looked at the game was in honor bound to help pay his share of the cost. Enough saw the game to have about met all expenses. But sad to relate for Kentucky honor far more staid outside the fence to see the sport than went inside. Some of the outsiders came in carriages. Most of them were well dressed. They would have been ashamed to beat their way into a lecture or concert. But what is the difference as a point of honor between doing that and beating the boys who carry on athletics for the pleasure of us all?

It is delightful to see and meet the real Kentucky gentleman. Mr. Burman, of Paint Lick, came in his family carriage, paid to bring in his family, and made the management a gift of $1.00 to help on mauls sports. Such courtesy is appreciated. We are glad and grateful to make public mention of it. Mr. Dan Breck, of Richmond, also gave the boys $1.00. Those who know our genial insurance man are not surprised.

Some of our neighbors, who were on the wrong side of the fence last Saturday, are true Kentuckians in their love of honor and fair play. Now that they clearly understand that they took for nothing what cost somebody else the ready money, they will never do it again. Already they are ashamed, and will never be caught on the outside of the fence again among the goats.

There are to be more games this fall. In the name of fair play come out next time, bring your wife or sweet heart, and like true Kentuckians, always men of honor, buy two tickets, come inside, and enjoy the game with a clear conscience.—A Director of the Athletic Association.
